The Drills – They are a Turning and I'm Off to Red Lake

After nearly 3 months since West Red Lake Gold (RLG in Canada, HYLKF in the US) released very promising assays of 1.5 meters of 69 g/t gold from the last hole of their sixth hole fall 2015 drill program near Red Lake, Ontario, the drills are once again turning to chase this high grade intersection eastward. The previous six holes were drilled to the north into the east-west-trending regional structure known as the Pipestone Bay -- St. Paul deformation zone. The initial five holes traced the structure eastward toward where the northeast-trending Golden Arm structure intersects with the east-west trending zone -- the structural intersection. The sixth hole, RLG 15-24, was drilled into the western end of the alteration associated with the structural intersection and produced the bonanza grade gold results that has propelled the share price higher over the past few months to $.32/share.

The just announced June 2016 drill program started in the area of hole RLG 15-24 and will progress eastward over approximately 700 meters with the holes averaging between 100 meters and 250 meters in depth. Twenty kilometers to the east a similar geologically important intersection of two regional gold-bearing structures occurs near the world-class Red Lake mine and Campbell mine of Goldcorp - providing a highly encouraging geological model to target and best shows the significant exploration potential for high-grade gold zones on the company's West Red Lake project. With Goldcorp as a funding partner and with their experience in the Red Lake area targeting high grade gold deposits there is a strong likelihood that additional mineralization will be uncovered in this current drill program.

As a reminder, West Red Lake Gold has already tabled a very strong 43-101 compliant resource of approximately 1.1 million gold ounces at nearly 7.6 g/t gold. The inferred resource is located along a nearly 2 kilometer strike length from surface down to a depth of 350 meters at the location of the historic underground Rowan mine site. The resource can most likely be expanded further through deeper drilling which will be part of a follow-up drill program.

West Red Lake Gold is well funded with approximately $1 million in the treasury having closed a previously announced $575,000 private placement in addition to receiving nearly $482,000 from the exercise of all of the warrants set to expire in June 2016. The proceeds from the warrant exercise will be used to fund the fall 2016 drill program. In addition to the current cash on hand, financing partners of West Red Lake Gold have advised that they plan to participate in additional equity financings that would follow up on previous stock financings provided by them over the prior two years.

I'll be heading up to Red Lake in the next few weeks to meet up with Chairman Tom Meredith to get a bird's eye view of the drilling program and will I'll issue a follow-up report shortly thereafter.

The gold bull market is alive and well in 2016 and there has been little evidence that gold stock investors have sold in May and went away this year. After the worst five years in the history of the Canadian junior exploration sector from 2011-2015 where the average investor endured losses of over 85% the gains made in the first five months of 2016 are just the start of this emerging gold bull market which is still in the very early innings. Stay tuned!
